The Institute of Public Works Engineering Australia (IPWEA) is a professional organisation providing member services and advocacy for those involved in and delivering public works and engineering services to the community. This lunch is part of a series of Leadership events to encourage and develop public works professionals in Leadership.

At this lunch, Peter is going to share some of his thoughts on the key challenges facing the public works professionals in the coming years and also his views on the growth of Melbourne and the direction of the new State Government.

Peter has a background in engineering, planning and management with a Master of Engineering Science in Transport Planning and a Master of Urban Planning both from Melbourne University. His background encompasses both government and private enterprise roles.

With a professional career starting in planning new towns in the UK and Australia, much of Peter's career has been in Local Government as the CEO of several cities including Essendon, Greater Bendigo, Whitehorse, and the City of Sydney.

Peter was the CEO of Federation Square during its building phase and its first few years of operation and since mid 2007 has been CEO of the Victoria's Growth Areas Authority.

In this time the Authority has been responsible for the planning of 20 new suburbs and has a program to plan a total of 70 suburbs to house some 700,000 new residents using innovative, highly liveable and sustainable planning to build a future for Melbourne and to successfully manage its growth.
