Steve Bell

Mountaineer, Entrepreneur
& Public Speaker

British mountaineer Steve Bell discovered his passion for climbing as a teenager in 1975. By the time he was 21 he had made many notable ascents in the UK, the Alps (including winter ascents of the north faces of the Eiger and the Matterhorn), and Alaska. In 1981, he made the first of many visits to the Himalaya. Later, he worked for the British Antarctic Survey, spending four months in a tent in Antarctica, before serving for 4 years with the Royal Marines Commandos.

In 1987 Steve founded the company that was to become Jagged Globe, which is now one of the world's foremost mountaineering operators. He led many of its ground-breaking guided expeditions, including Everest in 1993, and he has climbed all of the seven continental summits.

Steve has made numerous contributions to mountaineering books, magazines and journals, including his own book 'Seven Summits'. A qualified international mountain guide, he has chaired several international high altitude mountaineering organisations, and has been actively involved in the development of the sport. In 2004 he emigrated to Melbourne, Australia. He is now the CEO of All Seasons Skiing & Snowboarding, which is bringing all year round skiing facilities to Australia.
